Poetical.

AMEN!

I cannot say,
Beneath the pressure of life's cares to-day,
I join in these;
But I can say
That I had rather walk this rugged way,
If Him to please.

I cannot feel
That all is well when dark'ning clouds conceal
The shining sun;
But then, I know
God lives and loves; and say, since it is so,
Thy will be done!

I cannot speak
In happy tones; the tear drops on my cheek
Show I am sad;
But I can speak
Of grace to suffer with submission meek,
Until made glad.

I do not see
Why God should e'en permit some things to be,
When He is love;
But I can see,
Tho' often dimly, through the mystery,
His hand above!

I do not know
Where falls the seed, that I have tried to sow
With greatest care;
But I shall know
The meaning of each waiting-hour below,
Sometime, somewhere!

I do not look
Upon the present nor in Nature's book,
To read my fate;
But I do look
For promised blessings in God's Holy Book;
And, I can wait.

I may not try
To keep the hot tears back—but hush that sigh,
"It might have been;"
And try to still
Each rising murmur, and to God's sweet will Respond, "Amen!"

—[F. G. Browning.

INTROSPECTION.

Baneful it is, and boding of no good,
To ever gaze within one's self, to find
Tee complex working of a morbid mind.;
To ever cower beneath a sheltering hood,
Poising the balance scale of ought and would,
Sighing for happy days, now left behind,
Scorning to think a future can be kind,
Hating a present scarcely understood.

Such introspection in brief time will break
The healthiest heart, and wreck it in the dust.
God knows how many a bitter cut and thrust
The world will give us for its selfish sake,
Without our poisoning the arrow head,
Which, if it kills not, sometimes leaves for dead.

Select Story.

JEALOUSY IN TWO WORLDS.

Students of the world's history are constantly learning that empires and epochs are born of trifles. But in how many cases these are legitimate births we have now no time to consider.

"And you must bring your friend with you."

Must he, indeed!

Now the more Lieutenant Stockton thought it over the further he seemed drifting from his stoical confidence. It did, indeed, appear a burlesque upon true greatness that a military man should be the victim of such fears. But before my readers pass judgment they must be better informed.

I wonder if there was any design in the founders of the military academy at West Point to develop the romantic tendencies of their country's young defenders? If so they have admirably planned; if not they have built stronger than they thought.

Crowning the crest of almost inaccessible heights, guarding the waters of the most historical of American rivers, the very site of this Rugby of the young soldier boy enjoins and applauds the marriage of love and war. If here we look for the ardor that pours out "noble blood as cheerfully as ever after a long day's sport, when, as infants, they rested their heads upon their mother's knees, or sank to sleep in her arms," we might also find explanation why devotion, born and bred here, should be fearless and steadfast, with hatred of naught save trifling and treachery.

"Commencement day" seems a misnomer to some; but I think the title born of a thought happy even unto inspiration. It is the close of the ideal life, but the commencement of real life; it is the door leading from the ante-room into the amphitheatre. But who can know of a happier or a prouder day? From that time forward there will always be heights to carry by "mining" or storm, but at that hour the victory is complete, and all the world that the collegian has been taught to see and know lies at his feet.

Lieutenant Stockton was susceptible to his surroundings—just as far as a tolerably cool temperament permits itself. In fact, he willfully surrendered himself to the delusions of the hour. For four years he had been the servant—if not the slave—of discipline and study, and now came home to Boroughton with the purpose of finding life and living it. And that he might the better enjoy his rest he had insisted upon the company of young Landers, who, having passed his second year at the academy, was permitted for the first time to air his brass buttons and military walk in the outer world.

Boroughton was too small a place not to wonder at anything wonderful. So, when it became noised abroad that Lieutenant Stockton was engaged to Jennie Hanlan inquiry was first enthusiastically directed to gathering all the shreds of evidence that supported the report, and then to debating the question: "Resolved, that Jennie Hanlan is not the girl for Lieutenant Stockton," with the affirmative universally triumphant.

But as Lieutenant Stockton cared very little for such innocent interference, he never called for the report of the committee, and nothing seemed able to cloud his anticipations of again meeting the object of his passion. Philosophers may tell you how earnest natures and soaring ambitions are overturned by flashing eyes and coquettish ways, and it is an interesting study, but Lieutenant Stockton would have assured you that the point was not an issue, and that he had fallen in love with the true womanhood that lay underneath all else.

For all these reasons he was rather aggressively proud of Jennie Hanlan—more so than of his own commission or academical honors—and so it came to pass that his first demand on Harry Landers was for his company on a visit to her house. And our story begins where that visit ends.

Jealousy is proof of the presence of love and the absence of confidence. Both elements are necessary factors in the product. If a man is indifferent to a woman's favors, or certain of them, he cannot be jealous; but if he loves and doubts her, he cannot be anything else.

Lieutenant Stockton's devotion to Jennie Hanlan was established—the sewing circles all conceded it while pretending to wonder at it—but his confidence seemed yet more boundless. She might go with whom she pleased, smile as sweetly as she divinely willed, dance with the young lawyer all night, and write down to the academy a full bill of particulars with the utmost impunity. But this night—well! well! there was no possible excuse for his folly, and he would think no more of it.

Bright and early next morning he left Harry Landers in the library—writing a letter home—and saddling his horse, rode over to Sackett's Harbor to take dinner with a favorite aunt, and listen to the advice that had been gradually accumulating over his head for the past two years.

In all these anticipations the Lieutenant was not disappointed. He received a hearty welcome, an excellent dinner and even better advice; the third-class blessing being, by the way, so long protracted that it was not until late in the afternoon that he was able to imprint the farewell kiss on the old lady's cheek, and begin his retreat from her hospitality.

But at so sharp a pace did he urge the sorrel mare that the sun was yet an hour high when the centre of Hepworth Forest was reached and time was granted him to stop at the Powder Springs—a favorite spot with him from childhood.

Our memories are loyal to the law of association, and as the Lieutenant fastened the mare to a tree a little from the highway and then threw himself on a grassy knoll by the spring, a panorama of his young life, before epaulettes and ambition's dream had come to dazzle, seemed to rise before him. His truant days, when without furlough he had stayed from school with certain boon companions, the hour she spent at this very spot, the fun of splashing the waters of the brook in one another's faces, or building a dam a bit below the fountain source, with faintest manifestations of that engineering skill that was to score him high at the academy.

But how could he chase such thoughts long ere they brought him to when the eyes of Jennie Hanlan seemed blacker and brighter than the eyes of the other girls, and his bashful glances were answered by yet more ardent ones, until when he finally essayed to rival her boldness she would turn away and smile as sweetly elsewhere, and he awoke to find himself head over heels in love with the greatest flirt in the school? But as they grew older he was certain Jennie improved. until, one bright morning—the very brightest of his life—the past wes all secured by that letter of all letters, that answered his inflammable epistle from the academy, and assured him that she, Jennie Hanlan, thoughtless, wayward Jennie Hanlan, would be his own true sweetheart forever and ever—amen.

How much longer this young man of 23 would have suffered such communions as these to drive his aunt's advice from a level head was never tested, for just then a step was heard, and with it another, and a remarkably gruff voice announced that they would stop right there.

Almost instinctively the Lieutenant kept very still, but a natural curiosity led him to peer through the foliage to where they had seated themselves. They were not a specially refined or attractive brace of tourists, or such as would make congenial company in a back alley on a dark night, if one might judge from appearances. It should be said they were dressed in considerably better style than the model tramp, but their clothes seemed to speak rather of former splendors than of future hopes, of a setting than a rising sun. But their conversation was decidedly more interesting than themselves.

"He was a trim cut youngster, now, wasn't he, Jack?"

"All brass buttons are," came the surly answer.

"And so sweet on the girl that I got jealous; eh, Jack" with an heroic effort to arouse his companion from his stupor.

But Jack appeared wrapped in thought and so was the Lieutenant. A great light was shining out from a most unexpected source. Harry Landers stood for the "brass buttons," and Jennie Hanlan was out riding with him, and the bitter suspicions of the last night returned with tenfold force.

"Now, Jack, you're a bit envious of me," said the more talkative one, with a grim sense of the humorous, which Jack didn't seem to appreciate.

"I was wondering what time of day it is."

It seemed an innocent and reasonable manner of wonder, but his companion looked at him inquiringly. Jack's answering glance appeared to satisfy him.

"It's a go, Jack, but I hate to frighten the girl."

"Of course," answered Jack, with an oath, "she might cut your acquaintance, or refuse your hand at the next German."

The grimness of the remark brought a loud "Ha! ha!" from his companion, which Jack instantly suppressed with his scowling looks, as he muttered that it was time for them to be back.

The idea that the gay young cavalier and the object of his passion would soon be that way seemed to furnish food for reflection for all three, and the silence of nature's spot came back. It could not have lasted long, but it seemed a full age to Lieutenant Stockton. Again the coy glances of Jennie Hanlan were stealing toward him, and then she was beseeching him to defend her. When had he dreamt of a greater privilege? When would his sabre so gaily have leaped from his scabbard? But his arm shrank back now as if there was pollution in the cause. He was asked to re-establish the throne of treachery and to crown the queen of coquettes.

He would care no more for Jennie Hanlan than for any other human being, not so much as for the beggar along the way; and yet suppose he didn't—what then? What mattered it all? And he stole toward the sorrel, unfastened her, and felt for his revolver.

There was a heavy step crushing the underbrush behind him, and then the sensation of a weight of a hemisphere falling upon his head, and the earth seemed to rise up toward him—and all was blank.

* * * * * *

It was a strange place where Lieutenant Stockton next found himself. He was walking a level plain, which presented no object as far as the eye could reach. Suddenly a man of stunted growth seemed to spring as from the ground before him. The more the Lieutenant watched him the better he was satisfied he had met him before; but his perfect identification was possibly prevented by the inexpressible sadness of his face.

"What makes you so unhappy?" asked the Lieutenant.

"Because I'm dead," was the abrupt reply.

The Lieutenant involuntarily shuddered, and again looked about him over the plain.

"And what place is this?"

"Hell!" and the eyes leered up at him with so exulting a grimace that the Lieutenant started back, whilst the only name he had known him by in the other world leaped to his lips.

"Jack!"

But "Jack" had as suddenly vanished as he had appeared, and the Lieutenant was only left to wonder if Henry Landers had killed him and saved Jennie.

Then a gloomy castle rose before him, and the Lieutenant entered a door that opened before him. He was in a library, elegantly furnished and "booked;" but his entrance had attracted another's attention, and a young man looked up from his writing. It was Harry Landers.

To say that Lieutenant Stockton was surprised is to suppose that anything could surprise him now, but there was a passionate exultation which turned instantly to haunt him with "Shame!" and "Devil!" He had indeed been metamorphosed into one.

Both seemed to know all, and as Harry started up he drew his revolver. Almost simultaneously the library of the strange castle heard the sharp reports ring down its corridors and galleries.

Lieutenant Stockton could feel the hot lead hissing through his brain, but he was living through his agony; this world knew no death. Yet he reeled and staggered, his eyes yet fixed on Harry Landers. When a stream of blood burst from the boy's forehead he could have cried out with joy—only he was too weak, and fell to the floor.

That moment a screen to the light suddenly seemed wrenched apart, and Jennie Hanlan, with dishevelled hair and pallid cheeks, rushed between them. Lieutenant Stockton seemed only living now to watch her first movement. She tottered toward him, but he rudely pushed her back and ironically begged her not to be as false to Harry as to him.

"Why, Robert!" And as his own name was sounded in the old way he seemed to fall asleep despite himself, and when he awoke he was in his own room at home, and Jennie Hanlan was bidding him keep quiet or the doctor would not let her stay.

"Mr. Landers will go," though her voice trembled as she spoke.

"Landers be hanged!" exclaimed the Lieutenant, whereupon Jennie Hanlan burst out crying.

"Oh, why do you speak to me so, Robert?"

"And when did you see Harry last?" inquired the same ironical voice.

"Once since the night he called with you—right here a few moments ago—but at sight of him you raved so that the doctor banished him from the premises."

"Were you not out riding with him Thursday afternoon?"

A light seemed breaking upon Jennie Hanlan's mind, and it shed its brightness over her pale face.

"Riding with Mr. Landers? No, indeed! And did they knock all your brains out, dear Lieutenant?" with an effort to suppress her gathering mirth. "And now tell me, Robert, if you have been jealous ever since Mr. Landers and Nellie Harding found you so badly hurt last night on their stopping at the Powder Springs?" And the tempting lips were bent so close to his that the Lieutenant forgot his headache and kissed them.

The White House.

Its corner stone was laid on the 13th of October, 1792, under the superintendence of Captain James Hobon, an Irish architect, direct from Dublin, who accepted the award of $500 (then thought to be a large amount) for the design.

He is buried in the Catholic cemetery at Washington, and his descendants still live in that city.

The British destroyed the building in the year 1814, but it was rebuilt by Captain Hobon, and was first opened for visitors on January 1, 1818.

The portico of four lofty columns, on the north side, was added in 1829, during the administration of President Jackson.

It is a lofty building, two stories in height, with a frontage of one hundred and eighty feet and a depth of eighty five feet. The vestibule within the front door is fifty feet long by forty wide. The famous East room, which was finished fifty years ago, is eighty feet long, forty feet wide and twenty two feet high.

Eight large mirrors and three chandeliers, of crystal and silver, adorn the room. The walls are covered with gray paper, and the furniture is trimmed with gray rep and maroon velvet. With the exception of our public halls it is the largest in the country and for its size, is certainly the handsomest.

The President's office, which is on the second story, and which is the Cabinet room also, is not very large. It is thirty five or forty feet long and twenty or twenty-five feet wide, with a ceiling about twenty feet high. In the middle of the floor is a long table, surrounded by leather seated chairs; long lambrequin curtains of a dark blueish color adorn the windows, and the carpet is of a red tint, with large figures, and a large map of the United States is on the wall.

Washington is a Government creation, and the White House is chiefly memorable on account of the men who have lived in it. Every one of our Presidents, except Washington, has resided in this famous house.

The original cost of this building in 1792 was about $335,000, and the total cost up to this time about $1,806,000.

A New York goat came west with a lot of poor children sent out to western homes, and the first day it was on an Iowa farm it ate half a mile of barbed wire fence and wanted more. It is almost impossible to teach a New York goat to eat grass or clover, when he has been brought up from earliest infancy on corset rods, tomato cans and wrecked hoop skirts.

His Honor and Bijah.

"Say!" he called, as he entered the door.

Bijah looked up from his sweeping and recognized him. It was the same old vag, who, three months ago, entered the station and cried Bijah out of fifty cents in cash and then stole his vest as he went out.

"Say, I've just lost my mother," continued the vag; but at that instant he remembered his former call and slid for the street like a hen dodging a pan of dishwater. A thunderbolt followed, and he had not gone fifty feet, when a hand seized his collar and held him fast. He was led back and locked up, and when His Honor came in and opened court, the old weeper was first to be led out:

"James Y. Jones," began the court, "I am given to understand that you can weep when occasion requires."

"What occasion?"

"On all occasions when you can turn your tears into money. You told Bijah that you had lost three children by scarlet fever—home broken up—wife run away—out of money, and you wept."

"And why shouldn't I?"

"Because you hadn't even a dog to lose by death. Your tears brought a lump into his throat, and he went down into his hind pocket for half a dollar. You blessed him and went way—blessed him and stole his vest."

"And he's got it on now?" cried Bijah as he looked closer.

"So he has—so he has. I recognize it by those buttons you sewed on with a darning-needle and some kite string. John Y., you are a bad man."

"I've seen wuss sir."

"So have I, but they didn't hang around here long. Let's see? Ninety days will let you out just as Winter begins."

"Oh, sir!"

"And your tears will freeze as they fall, and can be put on exhibition."

"Gimme one more chance—just one!"

"Too late! You have cried your career to its end. Take him in, Bijah, and chalk his back for a straight ninety."

NOT GOOD FOR MELONS.

"Phillip Hornberger."

"Dot's me."

"Last night you felt like eating watermelon!"

"Dot's me some more."

"Going to a grocery on Gratiot avenue you selected one about the size of a side hill, beat the price down to thirty cents, and then tried to pay for it with a doorknob and six ten-penny nails."

"But he wouldn't took 'em."

"No, and you kicked the melon to pieces."

"My foot slipped."

"Well your whole body is going to slip this morning. I'll make it $5 or thirty days."

"I guess I bays der cash and keep out of shail."

"Very well. Two and two are four and one is five. Next time pay for your melon."

"Next time I pays a squash."

"Sait yourself—good morning—hand out the next—go out of the front door—now then who's the next victim?"

THE WHISKEY CURE.

It was a mild-eyed, long-haired young man of 27, who answered to the name of Donald O' Grinnel, and he wanted to know of the Court if he couldn't have a glass of lemonade before his trial.

"Guess not," answered his Honor. "Bijah had a lemon around here five or six weeks ago, but ten to one the cockroaches have lugged it off and traded it for gum drops. It won't hurt you any to be tried."

"I feel all gone."

"Yes, I suppose so. I've never had the sensation myself, but I've seen so much of it here that I can imagine what it is. What ailed you last night?"

"I felt bad."

"And what did you do for it?"

"Took a prescription."

"Just so. It was a thumping big drink of whiskey on top of two beers, wasn't it?"

"I—I believe so, but I'm so gone that I can't tell."

"Poor youth! You are assistant to a florist in the suburbs. You came to town about dark last night with your hat on your ear and a desire in your heart to mash some one. You took a prescription to give you further courage, and you went into a Michigan avenue store and offered to chew the proprietor into shavings for 2 cents."

"Did I do that?"

"Of course you did. You called yourself the War Engine of Detroit, and you annoyed the man until he made your heels hit the ceiling and then flung you into the alley."

"And then what?"

"Then you slept the sleep of the drunk, and your snores guided the officers to the spot."

"Well, I'm awfully sorry."

"Yes, so am I. It's a pity you are not a statesman instead of a loafer."

"I guess I'll begin from this very morning to be a statesman."

"I guess you won't! You'll begin this morning to go to the Work House for three months!"

"That finishes me; I might as well die at once."

"Well, do your dying in the corridor, and please don't kick around and smash Bijah's new coal stove. Fall back and die and make room for the next."

WOULDN'T TRY HIM.

John McMasters was as mad as a bee with a pin in him as he sailed out. He was little, and old, and bald-headed and gray, and he had come down from the upper counties and got tight on a glass of beer, and set out to whip a telegraph pole with one hand tied behind him.

"I demand my discharge!" he shouted as he toed the mark.

"Well, you can't have it," quietly replied his Honor, as he finished up a harvest apple from his pocket and began eating it.

"Who's going to try me?"

"Nobody."

"Yes there be! I demand to be tried! I'll see if I'm to be collared on the street and hauled off to a bastile in this fashion."

"What's the charge?"

"Drunkenness."

"I wasn't drunk!"

"I didn't say you were. You can go."

"I won't stir a step."

"Oh, yes you will. I haven't any time to fool away with such tempered old men as you are, and I won't try your case at all."

"I'm an American citizen."

"That's nothing. I can find you more than a dozen others in this city. Come be off."

But he wouldn't go, and Bijah had to pick him up and carry him out.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, October 21, 1881.

One praiseworthy feature of President Arthur's administration is the elimination of Ohio politicians from the cabinet. Now if the President would send home a few hundreds of office holders from that State the country would draw a long breath of relief. The Ohio regime has not reflected any great lustre on the nation.

Certain newspapers are disquieting themselves concerning the suggested investigation of John Sherman's management of the Treasury by President Arthur. There is no need to worry. Neither Arthur nor any other Republican President will reveal facts that would bury the Republican party fathoms deep under popular wrath and indignation.

It is now announced by Mr. Scoville, counsel for Guiteau, that all questions of jurisdiction and malpractice will be waived and the defense will take their stand on the plea of insanity alone. The determination has been arrived at because of the short time in which they have to prepare for trial, and because of the discovery of Guiteau's application some time ago for a pension. Guiteau had never been in the army, and the medical examiner indorsed upon the papers, "insane."

Professor King, the aeronaut, and J. G. Hashagan of the Signal Service, made a balloon ascension from Chicago on Thursday of last week, during a storm. The air ship was seen on the following day over Sparta, Wisconsin and then disappeared from view. It is feared that the voyagers have been carried over to the dense forests of upper Wisconsin and the balloon dashed to pieces against the trees. Even if Prof. King and his companion escaped injury and reached the ground in safety they might wander for days before finding a clearing. Even experienced woodsmen find it difficult to make their way out of these thick woods

For the last year or more Senator Edmunds has been posturing before the country as a gentleman of a reformatory turn of mind, and has furnished another convincing illustration of the truth that the average reformer is merely a partisan with a dash of the hypocrite to give him a moral sort of flavor. It would be an excellent idea for the Republicans to put Mr. Edmunds into the New England vacancy on the Supreme Bench. He could doubtless be depended on, whenever the occasion arose, for taking a new slant on the legal tender question, or getting up another electoral commission to do the bidding of the party with neatness and despatch.

The grand total of expenditures for the sickness and funeral of President Garfield have been estimated by the Indianapolis Sentinel at $347,650. Of this large sum the doctors' bills are set down as $53,000. The United States will pay about $100,000, and the balance will be liquidated by the State of Ohio, the city of Cleveland and private individuals. It is probable that Congress will vote Mrs. Garfield the whole salary of the President for the year, and it is said that an effort will be made to give her a pension of $5000 per annum. The fund raised by subscription for Mrs. Garfield now amounts to nearly $350,000, so that she will have an income of almost $15,000 a year, exclusive of the pension.

The ceremonies at Yorktown began on Tuesday. The corner stone of the monument was laid with Masonic ceremonies in the presence of some 60,000 people. The President, Cabinet officers, Gen. Hancock and other officials were present, but the French guests of the nation did not arrive in time. There was great lack of accommodations for visitors, the dust was ankle deep and the heat unbearable. The complaint of bad management was universal. The Pennsylvania troops with Gov. Hoyt and Gen. Hartranft reached the grounds on Wednesday morning. An address was delivered on Wednesday by the President, who was followed by Robert C Winthrop of Massachusetts, Marquis de Rochambeau, Baron Steuben and others. The grand military review took place on Thursday.

WHAT REPUDIATION WILL DO.

At a recent reception tendered Senator Mahone of Virginia, in New York, Judge Noah Davis had something to say of what Mahone had done "to give an education to the poor and lowly." The New York World states that the effect of Mahone's educational measure called the Riddleberger bill will be to ruin every college in Virginia and gives facts and figures to prove the assertion. The World says that many years ago these colleges invested their funds in Virginia State securities. Washington and Lee University took $91,758.27 worth of bonds, yielding $5,505.48 annual interest. Senator Mahone, with the indorsement of Judge Davis, proposes to force the college to accept in full satisfaction of this debt $40,781 44, yielding at the most $1,200 a year interest. Hampden-Sidney college holds $70,550 worth of bonds, which Senator Mahone graciously offers to "readjust" into $31,356. To the Randolph-Macon College he tenders $8,760 in a lieu of $19,708. To Richmond College $29,344.80 instead of $44,017.19. To the Blacksburg Agricultural and Mechanical College $182,570 instead of $344.313—being a loss of $161,743 to be inflicted on an institution especially designed for the benefit of the farmers of Virginia. To the Hampton Normal Colored School, established to educate the "poor and lowly" Africans of Virginia, he offers $91,285 instead of $172,156. This gives us within a fractional amount of three-quarters of a million of bonds purchased in part with the money of testators bent on serving the people of Virginia and in part with the results of a close management of earnings, but in all cases purchased in a firm reliance on the public honor and honesty of the Old Dominion, at which Senator Mahone last night sneered, amid the applause of the Union League Club of New York, as a thing of little consequence in comparison with the control by Republican placemen of the Federal spoils.

Decent Republicans are asked to support these repudiators and assist in breaking down all the respectable institutions of learning in the State. Such a pill must be hard to swallow and it is little wonder that many Republicans firmly refuse to take the dose.

THE COUNTY TICKET.

When the ballot boxes are closed on 8th of November, they ought to contain the votes of all the Democrats of Columbia county for the full county ticket. There is no reason why the majority this year should not reach the maximum. There are no independent candidates, and the vote for Greenback and Prohibition aspirants for office is not likely to be large. The campaign has been so quiet and so devoid of exciting features that there is some danger of apathy on the part of voters.

Every Democrat ought to feel it a duty to vote for the men duly nominated in convention and ought to do all in his power to swell the majority to its greatest. The candidates are as much entitled to the full support of the party in an "off year" as they are when a Governor or a President is to be chosen. See to it that not only is your own vote deposited but also that your neighbor's is. A little energetic action is all that is required to get out the full vote, and a few earnest men in each township can readily secure such a result. Farm work will not be so pressing on election day as to prevent farmers from giving an hour or so to their duty as citizens. The men chosen to do the public work of the county should be put in office by something better than a bare majority. Let the Democratic voters of the county do as they would be done by and elect their ticket by a vote of which they can feel proud hereafter.

DUELS IN VIRGINIA.

Richard F. Beirne Jr., editor of the Richmond Va., State wrote an editorial for his paper, last Friday, denouncing H. H. Riddleberger as unworthy of belief. In a later edition of the same paper appeared the card of Hon. George D. Wise, congressman from that district, in which Riddleberger was called a liar and scoundrel. Riddleberger promptly challenged them both. He met Beirne the following morning but the duel was postponed because the latter's seconds had neglected to provide caps for the pistol. The meeting with Wise occurred in the afternoon. Three shots were exchanged but neither man was injured. Beirne was arrested and Wise and Riddleberger will be when found.

On the same night Senator Mahone was arrested for accepting a challenge from old Gen. Jubal A. Early. He denied the charge and was released on his personal bond. These hostile meetings have grown out of the bitter political fight now being waged in the State, and it is said that after the election there will be many more. If all the parties to the duels above mentioned had been placed hors de combat the State would have been better off. The next best thing would be to keep the participants in jail until after the election.

The Republican party, which is now engaged in aiding the Mahone-Riddleberger faction to repudiate the state debt, must feel proud of its allies. The people will have something to say before long, concerning this Republican deal with repudiators and duellists.

PARNELL ARRESTED.

The Irish question assumes a new phase by the arrest of Charles S. Parnell, the agitator, on the morning of the 13th inst. in Dublin. He is charged with inciting people to intimidate others from paying their just rent and with intimidating tenants from taking the benefit of the land act. The news of the arrest spread like wildfire and the excitement grew intense. As a measure of precaution the guards and police in the city were increased and a special force of troops was detailed to guard the jail in which Parnell is confined. Under the law covering the offence with which he is charged no bail can be taken, and he must remain in confinement until trial. Members of the Land League are indignant at the arrest and indignation meetings have been held in this country and abroad. The arrest was not wholly unexpected, at least to those best informed as to the exact condition of affairs. Parnell has bitterly opposed the workings of the land act, though he was at first perfectly satisfied with that measure. It is impossible to predict what results may flow from this proceeding on the part of the government, but any overt acts on the part of sympathisers with Parnell will undoubtedly be met by stern measures. Mr. Gladstone made a speech at the Guild Hall, London, on the day of the arrest, and in announcing the event, said that the first step had been taken toward the vindication of law and order, of the rights of property and of the first elements of civilization. He said Parnell had made himself prominent in an attempt to destroy the authority of the law. He said he firmly believed that a majority of the tenants earnestly desired a fair trial of the land act. England had no fear of the people of Ireland, but only feared lest many more should become demoralized or intimidated. He would rejoice at the adoption of any form of self-government in Ireland, provided it did not impair the supremacy of the Imperial Government.

The Irish bishops and clergy have approved of the land act and have publicly thanked Mr. Gladstone for it.

DAVIS IN THE CHAIR.

The Republican Senators were greatly displeased with the election of Mr. Bayard as President pro tem and, in a caucus held to discuss the situation, determined to oust him. But one man was available as a candidate, David Davis, and it was resolved to put him forward. On Thursday of last week Logan introduced a resolution unseating Mr. Bayard and nominating Davis for the position. A vote was taken and Davis was elected, 36 to 34. The vote would have been a tie had the Republicans not owned Mahone, who, although elected Senator by Democrats, always votes with the party that bought and owns him. To this accidental majority the Republicans owe their success. Mr. Bayard refrained from voting. The "independent" Davis has not gained in reputation by his election under such circumstances, and has earned the contempt of the better class of people without regard to political affinities. He has always been greedy for honors and it is presumed the measure of his ambition is now filled. Now the country knows just what the "independency" of David Davis is, and knows too that it extends no further than his personal interests. The Republicans of the Senate are now maintained in power by Mahone the renegade Democrat, Kellogg who holds his seat on a fraudulent certificate and who was never elected at all, and David Davis. It is not an invigorating spectacle and will add no strength to the party throughout the county. Senator Bayard possessed the confidence of the whole people, as a statesman of acknowledged ability and integrity; Davis has the confidence of no class and is distrusted by those who have profited by his advancement. His actions will be closely watched to see what he is to gain by the "deal." The following extract from a speech made in the Senate on the 11th of March last reads well at the present time, and serves to show how much faith can be placed in his utterances:

"An honorable recognition of the trust generously confided to my keeping by Democratic voters in 1877 requires me to sustain the existing organization of the Senate. Whatever may be the result, I can accept no honor at the hands of either side."

The New York Times, the leading Republican paper in the United States is of opinion that "the position of Mr. "Davis himself is not one which to a "man of delicate honor would seem in "all respects agreeable."

There are a good many people who think with the Times.

GUITEAU ARRAIGNED.

Guiteau, the assassin, was taken to court on Friday last and formally arraigned for the murder of President Garfield. He was conveyed to the court room in a carriage and no violence was attempted either in going or returning.

At about 11.15 Mr. Scoville, counsel for the prisoner, entered and took a seat. Immediately afterwards the door of the witnesses' room opened and gave entrance to Marshal Henry and two deputy marshals, having between them and hustling along the bowed and cowering figure of a man for whom they made way to the seat reserved for him beside his counsel. Then one of the guards unlocked the handcuffs, giving him the use of his hands, which he continued, however, to hold crossed as if that was their usual position. Guiteau looked broken in health and uncared for in person. His hair is closely cropped, but his cheek and chin whiskers are worn thick, but not long. His dark clothes were rusty and shabby, and his whole person presented a miserably neglected appearance. After the excitement attending his appearance had subsided, District Attorney Corkhill rose, and addressing the jury said: The grand jury of the district of Columbia has indicted Charles J. Guiteau for the murder of James A. Garfield. The prisoner is in court. I ask that he be arraigned and required to plead to the indictment.

THE ASSASSIN ARRAIGNED.

The prisoner was ordered to stand, and, in a languid manner, obeyed. The clerk:

"Is your name Charles J. Guiteau?"

The prisoner assented by a nod.

The clerk proceeded to read the indictment, the prisoner standing up, with his head most of the time inclined to the right shoulder, his eyes half closed, or wholly so; his hands crossed over his stomach as if they still wore the handcuffs, and his general look was of sickly indifference. The reading occupied nearly half an hour, and during all that time Guiteau hardly once changed his attitude or bearing, and rarely opened his eyes. He did not manifest the slightest degree of interest in the scene in which he was the chief actor, and but for an occasional slight movement might be supposed to be asleep in a standing attitude.

Upon conclusion of the reading of the indictment the clerk, addressing the prisoner, said: "What say you to this indictment, guilty or not guilty?"

The prisoner, in place of response, fumbled in his waistcoat pocket and drew out a soiled and crumpled scrap of paper.

HE PLEADS "NOT GUILTY."

The District Attorney (imperatively). —Enter your plea of guilty or not guilty.

The Prisoner.—I enter a plea of not guilty. If your honor please, I desire to make a statement.

The Court.—At some other time. It would not be appropriate just now. Sit down.

The prisoner thereupon took his seat.

The District Attorney.—In this case I ask that the trial be set for next Monday morning peremptorily. The government is ready for trial now.

GUITEAU'S WITNESSES.

Mr. Scoville: I appear here for the defendant, at his request, and I have some affidavits to present to the court, the first being that of the defendant himself.

The affidavit, which was read, states that there are various witnesses whose evidence is material for the prisoner's defense, and without which he cannot safely go to the trial; that the names of such witnesses, and the facts that can be proved by them, severally, are well known to the affiant's counsel, Mr. George Scoville, and are only known in part by the affiant; that he has no property, and is unable to pay the fees or mileage of witnesses or the cost of summoning. He therefore prays that the court shall allow such witnesses on his behalf, as may be shown by affidavit of counsel to be necessary, the fees and costs to be paid in such manner as those of government witnesses are paid.

THE TWO POINTS OF DEFENSE.

Mr. Scoville then read the affidavit made by himself. It states that besides the points of law that may be made the defense will consist of two points. First, the insanity of the defendant, and second, that the wound was not necessarily mortal and was not the cause of President Garfield's death. It contains a list of witnesses, and avers that the brother of defendant's father was insane and died in a lunatic asylum; that his cousin, daughter of another sister of prisoner's father, is insane and is now confined in a lunatic asylum; that prisoner's father was a monomaniac on religious subjects, and that he can prove prisoner's actual insanity upon several occasions. It also gives names of doctors, among them William A. Hammond, by whom he expects to prove that Garfield died by malpractice on the part of the physicians in charge.

A SURPRISE.

The second point assigned was a surprise, as few persons thought the question of malpractice would be brought up. Judge Cox fixed the trial for November 7th, but wishes to have the question of jurisdiction settled by October 30th Mr. Scoville is alone for the defense, but will probably have counsel assigned to aid him if he does not secure the services of a good lawyer. Guiteau was taken back to jail without trouble. The court room was densely crowded but no disorder occurred.

A SHORT ROAD TO HEALTH.

To all who are suffering from boils, ulcers, scrofula, carbuncles, or other obstinate diseases of the blood and skin, a course of Burdock Blood Bitters will be found to be a short road to health. Price $1.00, trial size 10 cents.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has entered suit in the Dauphin County Court against the Standard Oil Company for the possession of over $3,000,000 alleged to be due in taxes and penalties. This indicates an early trial, the Commonwealth cases having preference over others.

Washington Butcher's Sons, wholesale provision dealers of 146 North Front street Philadelphia, failed last week with liabilities estimated at $1,000,000. It is said that they have large assets and that the house will continue in business.

BEDS OF DOWN FEEL HARD.

All beds seem hard to the rheumatic. Then harken ye peevish sufferers! Apply Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil to your aching joints and muscles. Rely upon it that you will experience speedy relief. Such, at least, is the testimony of those who have used it. The remedy is likewise successfully resorted to for throat and lung diseases, sprains, bruises, etc.

An Irishman named Watson was cowhided by a party of masked women, on Tuesday night at Pine Grove, Cumberland county, for beating his wife.

Four hundred and fifty thousand dollars in cash and a large amount of supplies have been contributed thus far for the Michigan sufferers.

Six inches of snow fell at Quebec, Canada, on Tuesday.

IMPORTANT TO TRAVELERS.—Special inducements are offered you by the Burlington Route. It will pay you to read their advertisement to be found elsewhere in this issue. March 18 40-w

As Contractor Ralph Gere was superintending a deep excavation at Erie, a portion of the side slipped and burried him up to the shoulders, but with little or no injury. The City Engineer and Surveyor commenced to dig him out, when an immense mass of earth was seen to move from the top of the bank. The rescuers had to fly for safety, and the imprisoned man, left alone to certain death, calmly giving instructions concerning his family, awaited the gradual approach of the avalanche. After five minutes of this horrible suspense the mass, weighing hundreds of tons, plunged down the cutting on top of the doomed man. The crushed body was recovered last night.

A CHICAGO BROKER'S HAPPY INVESTMENT.

Lewis H. O'Connor, Esq., whose office is located at 93 Washington street, this city, lately related the following in the hearing of one of our reporters as an evidence of special good fortune. I have been suffering said Mr. O'Connor, for a number of weeks with a very severe pain in my back, believed to be from the effects of a cold contracted while on the lakes. I had been prescribed for by several of our physicians and used various remedies. Three days ago, I abandoned them all, and bought a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, applied it at night before retiring and to-day feel like a new man. I experienced almost instant relief and now feel no pain whatever.

Cuticura

PYÆMIA

Or Blood Poisoning, which Results in Abscesses, Ulcers, Sores, Carbuncles, Boils, Itching Humors, Cured.

FEVER SORE

What I tell you is the truth, told for no other purpose but to testify to the merits of the Cuticura Remedies. Mr. Frederick Yeaton, of this town, has been troubled for years with a Fever Sore on one of his legs. Last fall and all winter he could hardly walk a step. I induced him to take your Remedies. He has taken about four bottles Cuticura Resolvent, and used the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. His leg to-day is almost well, and he walks with ease. It was a sight to behold—black, and swollen very badly. I wish you could see his leg to-day. The change would astonish you.

CHAS. H. TRIPP, Alfred, Me.

SALT RHEUM

Will McDonald, 2542 Dearborn Street, Chicago, gratefully acknowledges a cure of Salt Rheum on head, neck, face, arms and legs, for seventeen years; not able to walk except on hands and knees for one year; not able to help himself for eight years; tried hundreds of remedies; doctors pronounced his case hopeless; permanently cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

GREAT BLOOD MEDICINES.

The half has not been told as to the great curative powers of the Cuticura Remedies. I have paid hundreds of dollars for medicines to cure diseases of the blood and skin, and never found anything yet to equal the Cuticura Remedies.

CHAS. A. WILLIAMS, Providence, R. I.

TREATMENT.

The Cuticura treatment for the cure of Skin, Scalp, and Blood Diseases, consists in the internal use of Cuticura Resolvent, the new Blood Purifier, and the external use of Cuticura and Cuticura Soap, the Great Skin Cures.

Price of CUTICURA, small boxes, 50c.; large boxes $1. CUTICURA RESOLVENT, $1 per bottle. Cuticura Soap, 25c. Cuticura Shaving Soap, 15c. Sold by all druggists.

Depot, WEEKS & POTTER, Boston, Mass.

44-INCH GRANITE CLOTHS
at............62½ cents.

Pure wool, and in garnet, brown, blue, green, plum, bronze, and gendarme; sold at this time last year for $1.

44-INCH ARMURES
at..............50 cents.

In solid colors. Being double-width, brings this excellent wearing, beautiful French dress goods at the rate of 25 cents per yard, single width. They were imported to retail at $1 per yard.

French SILK-MIXED NOVELTIES
(24 inches wide)
at..............50 cents.

These are very scarce and in great demand for Trimmings and Jackets. We believe we are the only house showing so varied an assortment. These goods were sold last year for $1.

FINE FRENCH NOVELTIES
at..............$1

None of the above ever sold for less than $1.50, and many at $2.

ENGLISH SILK-MIXED NOVELTIES
at..............25 cents.

24 inches wide, brilliant with silk, and sold last year at 50 cents.

44-INCH FRENCH PLAIDS
at..............87½ cents.

Fine and all wool, choice combinations, and sold last year at $1.25.

Besides these, we would like every one to see the BEST 36-INCH FRENCH COLORED CASHMERE AT 50 CENTS ever shown. Extra heavy, and as fine as any selling at 62½ cents.

Also, the BEST 48-INCH FRENCH COLORED CASHMERE AT 56 CENTS. ever shown. Equal to any sold at 65 cents.

We also show

FANCY SILK-MIXED BRITISH PLAIDS
at..............35 cents.

In French combinations, and selling everywhere at 50 cents.

ALL-WOOL MOMIE CLOTHS
at..............20 cents.

24 inches wide and in all colors. Regularly sold at 31 cents.

ELEGANT FANCY PLAIDS

The Bloomsburg Journal last week donned a new dress and presents a very neat typographical appearance. The paper has changed its form and is now a twelve-page sheet, quarto size, with a large additional amount of reading matter. The publisher has procured a new press as well as new type and the Journal is now a very pretty paper.

Mesdames Dreisbach and Snyder desire to inform the ladies of Bloomsburg and the country, that they have taken rooms in Solleder's building, Main street above Iron, where they will follow the business of milliners and dressmakers. The latest and best styles and patterns can always be found at their establishment and they feel assured that their work will give satisfaction.

The recent showers have done some good and have enabled the farmers to finish their seeding, but there is urgent need of more rain, and a great deal more. The springs and streams are very low and should cold weather set in before they are replenished, farmers will have great trouble in watering their stock. There is probably no danger of such a distressing event, but the year 1881 has been so peculiar that almost anything can be expected.

A large delegation from this county will attend the Northern Montour fair next Thursday, leaving Buckhorn at as near seven o'clock in the morning as possible. The Buckhorn band will accompany the party and the Executive Committee of the Columbia County Agricultural Society will also go. All who intend to visit this fair should be on hand at the time and place mentioned and make the procession as large as possible. It is probable that there will be an immense crowd. The famous Ringgold band, of Reading, will be one of the attractive features, and many persons will visit the grounds merely for the pleasure of listening to excellent music.

The following committees have been appointed by the several congregations of the town so far as heard from, to solicit aid for the Michigan sufferers:

Episcopal—Mrs. M. H. Clark, Mrs. Elias Mendenhall, Miss Mattie Wells.

Lutheran—Mrs. J. K. Bittenbender, Mrs. Samuel Turnbach, Mrs. Charles Hawert.

Reformed—Mrs. M. E. Ent, Miss Lizzie Dieffenbach, Miss Anna Ohl.

Baptist.—Mrs. Ruth Snyder, Mrs. Nancy Stetler, Miss Ettie Giger.

The committee will meet at the Episcopal church to-day (Friday) at two o'clock to arrange their work.

AN EVENING OF FUN.

This, Friday, evening Canfield & Lamont's European pantomime and novelty company will give an entertainment at the Opera House. The programme consists of acrobatic feats, songs and dances, musical performances and the pantomime of Humpty Dumpty. Among the performers are the three Lamonts, acrobats, Lulu Adams, Lizzie Mowbray and Jean Canfield, songstresses, John Hogan, song and dance man, Canfield and Homer, grotesque dancers. The troupe furnish their own orchestra and have a brass band. The press notices are very complimentary and especial praise is given to the really remarkable feats of activity and strength performed by the Lamonts. A programme of novelties, athletic and vocal, added to a pantomime, ought to give satisfaction and we look for a full house and an evening of merriment.

SEE THE CONQUERING HERO, ETC.

Among the most wonderful articles of the period is St. Jacob's Oil. The Hon. Leonard Sweet, of Chicago, pronounces it the most thorough conqueror of pain he has ever known.

In Wilkesbarre last week, the bond in the case of the North and West Branch railroad against the Susquehanna Coal Company to answer in damages for crossing the lands of the latter at Nanticoke was filed and approved in the sum of $10,000 with Charles Parrish and C. R. Buckalew as security. The grading of the road near the dam will be pushed forward to completion with all possible speed.

MARRIED.

On Thursday morning, October 13th, 1881, at the residence of the bride's parents in Centre township, in the presence of a limited circle of friends, Mr. Arthur C. Creasy and Miss Maggie L. Aikman were quietly joined in the bonds of holy wedlock, by the Rev. N. Spear, pastor of the Presbyterian church at that place.

Immediately after the ceremony the wedding dinner was served in a social informal manner, rendering the occasion homelike and pleasant.

Among the many valuable and handsome gifts, were two beautiful oil paintings that merited comment. They were painted and presented by the bridesmaid, Miss Lizzie Whitney.

Mr. and Mrs. Creasy left home amidst a shower of rain and old shoes, to take the 4.49 train at Bloomsburg. They expect to visit Elizabeth City, N. C. and several of the intervening cities on their wedding tour.

May they live long and well is the wish of their many friends.

PERSONAL.

W. B. Poust was in New York, the first of the week.

Mrs. Dr. Waller returned to her home in the West on Tuesday.

Messrs. Frederick and George Mann, of Syracuse, New York, have been the guests of Mr. C. W. Funston for the past week.

R. M. Tubbs, editor of the Shickshinny Echo, was in town on Tuesday.

Mr. J. C. Brown is somewhat better, though still a very sick man.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stiner, of Unionville, Tuscola county, Michigan, are visiting friends in this county. They formerly lived in Orangeville.

Mr. W. H. Jacoby is confined to the house by a complication of disorders—malaria, a disordered liver and a severe attack of neuralgia in the face and head. He has suffered intensely for the past three or four days, but is now getting better, and hopes soon to resume his duties.

F. H. Drake, Esq. Detroit, has recovered from a terrible skin humor, which covered his head, face and hands, by using Cuticura Resolvent internally and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally. This is good news.

HELEN POTTER.

Lovers of amusement have a treat in store next Wednesday evening, October 26th. The famous Helen Potter Pleiades will appear at the Opera House on that evening, in one of their delightful entertainments. The company this year consists of Helen Potter, the inimitable reader and impersonator; Mannie Louise Hart, a singer with a delicious soprano voice; J. Williams Macy, a basso of merit; Leopold Litchenberg, an accomplished violinist; Addie Barrett, a brilliant cornet soloist, and Anna Ring Greene an artistic pianist. Harry St. Ormond is musical director. Those who have heard Miss Potter read, and seen her remarkable impersonations, will be glad to take advantage of the opportunity now afforded them of spending another pleasant evening. To those who have not made Miss Potter's acquaintance we say, do so without fail. There is no company of its kind so good as the Pleiades, and our readers can attend this entertainment with the absolute certainty of being amply recompensed. There ought to be a crowded house to greet such genuine artists and there are enough people in Bloomsburg who delight in refined and cultured amusements, to fill every seat. The more troupes of this kind we can get, the better, and to ensure that desirable end there must be audiences of respectable size.

THE COUNTRY NEWSPAPER.

The Seneca Falls Reveille says: "The editing of a country newspaper is no light task, as many are led to believe. The identity and personality of the editor cannot be concealed or avoided; he speaks himself and all his readers know him, and upon him rests the whole responsibility of all he says. Self respect and an ardent desire to do well and to deserve well at the hands of his subscribers and patrons, prompts him to strive constantly in season and out of season so to conduct his journal as to reflect credit upon himself and upon the community in which it is published. The first and most essential thing in the conduct of a country journal is to have it clean. No line or word should be admitted to its columns that might not be repeated in the family circle. In its dealings with men it should be fair and just, —if occasion should arise for praise or blame it should be justly meted out. Personal prejudice and bias for good or ill should never control the editorial columns.

As a purveyor of news, the country paper needs much watching and constant scrutiny. To these essentials for the decent conduct of a newspaper must be added the need of the earnest co-operation of the community among whom it circulates, and for whose benefit, if properly conducted, it does so much. No class of men know better than editors the bitterness of a want of appreciation and of moral and material support. If people would only realize what advantage it is to a town to have a decent, well-conducted paper, they would with one accord tender such encouragement and support as would lighten the editorial burden and lift up the editorial heart. The labor bestowed on a live local journal is very great, and it should meet with a generous recognition on the part of all who are interested in the success and prosperity of the village in which it is published.

RESOLUTIONS OF CONDOLENCE.

The following resolutions were passed by St. Matthew's Evangelical Sunday School, of Bloomsburg, in memory of Jeunie Kitchen:

WHEREAS, We the members of this Sunday School, recognize God's hand in the removal by death of one of our most earnest and best scholars. Therefore, we do most unanimously pass these resolutions of love and respect:

Resolved, That we, with the bereaved and stricken parents, brother and sisters, bow in humble submission to the decree of "Him who doeth all things well."

Resolved, That we hereby assure the family of our deepest and most heartfelt sympathies in their time of deep affliction and great grief. We tenderly commend them to tell it to Jesus, "He will lighten their burden," for His assuring words are, "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted."

Resolved, That as we take a lesson from the faithful and regular attendance, and close attention given by her to the study of the lesson. While teacher and scholars will miss Jennie in her accustomed class, yet we know she has gone to a higher school in which Christ is the great teacher. Our loss is her infinite and eternal gain.

Resolved, That we, the teachers and scholars, have again been so forcibly and solemnly reminded of the frailty of human life and certainty of death, let us watch, work and pray with greater zeal and increasing earnestness for "in such an hour as we think not, the Son of Man cometh." May we so live that we shall meet the loved one just gone before.

THE COUNTY FAIR.

Successful Under Unfavorable Circumstances—Excellent Exhibits—Large Attendance—Fast Trotting.

The sunshine was of brief duration on the second day of the fair. Clouds of ominous blackness rolled up and covered the sky and heavy showers fell at intervals. The roads soon became muddy, and the grass too wet to walk upon with comfort or safety. It began to look as if, for the first time in the history of the Society, the weather would spoil the exhibition. Only a few hundred people were on the grounds and most of those were exhibitors and proprietors of booths. In the evening, however, the wind shifted to the West, the air grew cooler and the clouds dispersed. Friday was a perfect October day, clear, cool and bright. At an early hour the farmers and their wives, daughters and sweethearts began to arrive, and for several hours a steady stream of vehicles of all kinds and sizes, poured through the streets and into the fair grounds. Every train that arrived had its quota to add to the crowd. The scene in the afternoon on the grounds was very inspiriting. Men, women and children, to the number of 6,000, strolled about, inspecting the exhibits, listening to the music or patronizing the many booths and side shows. Hundreds of teams were tied to the fences and posts and every foot of available space was filled.

There was a large and good display of live stock, sheep, pigs, cattle and horses. The blooded animals were more numerous than usual and of a better class. All the stalls were occupied and there were enough entries to have filled many more. Farmers are evidently taking more interest in raising blooded stock, than they have heretofore.

The display of poultry was not extensive. There were some immense turkeys, a few ducks and chickens. James Shaffer exhibited a fine assortment of fancy pigeons and A. Solleder had pigeons and Golden Seabright fowls.

The agricultural machines were many and various—the best we have ever seen. They were handsomely painted and shone resplendent in brilliant colors and polished metal.

M. C. Sloan & Bro., had on exhibition two beautifully finished buggies and a platform pleasure spring wagon. They were fair samples of the excellent work always done by this firm. Mr. M. C. Sloan is a farmer as well as a carriage builder, and carried off the first prize for wheat.

C. E. Davenport, of Berwick, had a neat set of light single harness, well and attractively made.

Henry S. Reay deserves a word of praise for his elaborate display of paints. The numerous cans were arranged with good taste and produced a most creditable effect.

The exhibits of fancy articles, embroidery, fine needlework, (so interesting to the ladies and so wholly beyond the power of any newspaper man to describe intelligently,) were not only numerous but were said by competent judges to be better in quality than had ever been exhibited on any previous occasion. This we are disposed to believe because hosts of fair inspectors were always to be found in this department feasting their eyes on the novelties displayed.

Mr. David Lowenberg exhibited China and Japanese wolf robes, buffalo robes, suits for children and adults, overcoats and wearing apparel generally. One of the overcoats merits special mention. It was of very heavy, dark green Melton cloth, lined throughout with a superior quality of silk, substantially sewed, and showing a degree of finish and style most creditable to the maker. This coat, fully equal to any city make, cost much less than would be demanded in Philadelphia or New York for the same kind and quality of material.

J. Saltzer displayed the famous Estey organs, and different makes of pianos. One of the latter, a Hardman, had an ebonized case, a new and rich style which was very attractive. W. H. Yetter had the Ithaca pianos and organs, and the Domestic sewing machines. Some of the braiding, embroidery, quilting, &c., was really wonderful, and was as beautiful as anything of the kind that ever came under our notice. Gomer Thomas, of Danville, had a large assortment of pianos and musical instruments, and a crowd was always to be found at his stand listening to the playing of different performers. Very good music they furnished, and the audience was apparently gratified.

The display of fruits was not large, but the samples exhibited were of much better quality than was to have been expected in so unfavorable a season. The jellies, preserves, pickles, &c., were the best for years and received the praise they richly deserved.

There were hundreds of articles which we have not space to mention, though many of them are entitled to a favorable word. It is no more than just to say that, taking into consideration the many difficulties that were encountered, the recent fair will compare favorably with any of its predecessors, and in many respects exceeds them. In some of the departments the exhibits were never larger nor better, and the total number is greater than last year's. The buildings were all in good order, as were also the grounds. There was such a liberal use made of circulars and hand bills, that on the last day, the grass was literally covered with paper which drifted about at the caprice of the wind and disfigured the grounds.

There was no lack of minor amusements offered to the people. Booths abounded and at them could be obtained candies, the inevitable pink lemonade, peanuts, pop corn, cigars, toys, oysters and coffee. No intoxicating liquor was sold. An immense business was done in toy balloons and nearly every one of the hundreds of children on the grounds, was equipped with a pink or blue rubber bubble. The effect produced by the floating of these bright bits of color was very striking and, added to the various hues of ladies' attire, made a perfect kaleidoscope, when viewed from the towering height of the judges' stand. In addition to the booths just mentioned, there were places where you could shoot at a mark with parlor rifles, or throw base balls at wooden heads set at a convenient distance. The prize offered for knocking down a head was a cigar, and one dollar if three were struck in succession. So far as we observed, nobody carried off the dollar.

The Buckhorn band was engaged by the Society to play during the four days of the fair, and did their duty conscientiously and acceptably. Whenever a race was announced, the band proceeded from the band stand to the amphitheatre and discoursed divers airs, between the heats, to keep the people in good humor and oblivious of time.

In compliance with the programme made by the Society, there was a grand cavalcade of stock on Thursday morning. The inclemency of the weather deterred many from visiting the grounds and comparatively few persons had a good view of the animals—as the stalls are so narrow that the occupants cannot be seen to advantage. In the afternoon there was a foot race, which was easily won by Michael Clark, of Centralia.

The first trotting was for the county purse of $50—first horse $25, second $15, third $10. For this there were the following entries:

W. W. Sutliff's Dexter.
Jos. Knelly's Bird.
J. C. Mensinger's Brown Pat.
J. S. Blue's Sorrel Bob.

The latter won in three straight heats, but a protest was entered, and he was ruled out. Dexter was awarded first money, Brown Pat second, and Bird third. No time was taken. The mule race announced for the afternoon did not take place for lack of entries.

On Friday morning the colt race took place with the following entries:

John Shuman enters	br. m. Kitty Clay	1, 1, 1.
T. J. Vanderslice "	b. c. Bay John	2, 2, 2
Chester Cox "	r. m. Flora Cox	3, 3, 3.

Time, 3 29½, 3.21½, 3.18½.

There was a fourth entry, but after a protest had been made the driver refused to trot and withdrew. This little squabble wasted some time.

At the farmers' race in the afternoon, the grand stand was almost filled with spectators and there was much excitement manifested. The following is the summary:

Alfred Hess	enters	br. g. Dan	1, 1, 1.
G. W. Kelchner	"	b. h. ——	3, 3, 4.
Samuel Hidlay	"	blk. m. ——	2, 2, 2.
W. J. Hidlay	"	b. m. Dolly,	4, 4, 3.

Time, 3.45, 3.54, 2.56.

From the beginning it was seen that the driver of Dan was holding back his horse, and that he could win the race as he chose. This was conclusively proved in the third heat, when Dan was allowed his head and made the mile in nearly a minute faster than before. The trot was not of much interest, as it was apparent that neither of the ohters was a match for Dan. He is a promising young horse and Mr Hess, his owner, is proud of him. After the race he trotted an exhibition heat, and the time as announced from the stand was 2.53. This is not bad for a green horse, fresh from farm work and unused to the track.

The band contest was announced to take place at three o'clock, the purse being $25. The Catawissa cornet band was the only contestant and received the prize after playing several airs in its usual masterly style. It is an excellent musical organization and Catawissa has every reason to be proud of it.

The first thing on Saturday's programme was the prize for female equestrianism. This fell through, as for some reason or other the ladies did not come to time. A foot race, not on the programme, was made up to fill the vacancy caused by the non-appearance of the equestriennes and the non-performance of the marriage ceremony, which was postponed on account of the sickness of the would-be bride. Three young men entered for the race: Michael Clark, of Centralia; Tom Hirst, of Ashland, and John Johnson, of Catawissa. The distance was one mile. There was more excitement over this race than at any of the preceding horse trots. Clark took the lead at the start and maintained it until coming near the home stretch on the second half mile. Hirst, who up to that time had run a waiting race, and kept a few feet behind Clark, lapped his competitor, and then passed him, coming under the wire about a dozen feet ahead. The time announced was 5.04.

In the draught horse contest two teams competed, one owned by Jacob S. Martz, the other by Wesley Bowman. They drew 5500 lbs. of pig iron on a stone boat. Mr. Martz's team was decided to have pulled with greater steadiness and received the first prize.

An attempt was made to get an additional free for all race in the morning, but it was not successful.

The programme closed with a free for all race; for a purse of $185; $100 to first horse, $60 to the second and $25 to the third. Before the horses were brought upon the track, the sound of martial music attracted the attention of the people, and all eyes were turned towards the main entrance to the grounds. The gates swung open, and the fire companies of Bloomsburg, in full uniform, and drawing their hose carriages and truck, entered and passed around the track. The men looked and marched well, and the apparatus was as neat and trim as could be made by care and attention. This parade was an unexpected feature of the day's proceedings and was highly appreciated. The line was formed in the following order: The Friendship Fire Company, 25 strong; the Rescue Hose and Hook and Ladder Company, 20 strong, and the Winona Hose Company, 18 strong. The members of the latter company appeared for the first time in public in their new uniforms and looked remarkably well. It was a fine display and gave the people of both town and county a better idea of the fire department of Bloomsburg than could have been conveyed in an ordinary street parade.

After the firemen had passed, the horses were called up and it was found that there were three entries: A. Davidson's Naiad Queen, Major Hicks' Lem and W. A. Hartzel's Dan. The latter was entered to fill out the list and was sure of third money. The company was a good deal too fast for him and he was not an important factor in the race. The other horses were speedy and well matched and gave as interesting and exciting a trot as was ever seen on this track. The grand stand was crowded with spectators, a fact that proves the attractive power possessed by good horses. In assigning places, the mare got the pole, with Lem second and Dan on the outside. On the word "go," the mare obtained a slight lead and maintained it through the heat, trotting the mile without a skip in 2.29. Lem broke several times, losing ground each time.

In the second heat both horses left their feet two or three times, neither gaining any advantage. There was an exciting struggle from the three-quarter pole and the two horses swung into the home stretch neck and neck. The mare did the best trotting and passed under the wire the winner by a neck in 2.28.

The mare struck herself in the third heat, left her feet and became so nervous that Lem took the lead and crossed the score a couple of lengths ahead, in 2 29½.

In the fourth and final heat the mare settled down to her work and trotted beautifully. The horse behaved badly, breaking several times and dropping behind so far that the mare was an easy winner. Time, 2.28.

It was agreed on all sides that a better race had never taken place on the track, although faster time has been made on one or two occasions. The following is the summary:

A. Davidson enters	b. m. Naiad Queen,	1, 1, 2, 1
James Hicks enters	b. s. Lem	2, 2, 1, 2
W. A. Hartzel enters	b. g. Dan	3, 3, 3, dr.

Time, 2.29, 2.28, 2 29½, 2.28.

The winner of each heat was loudly cheered and crowds surrounded both horses as they were brought in front of the judge's stand when the result was announced.

NOTES.

Incredible as it may appear to the people of Bloomsburg, it is nevertheless a fact that numbers of people who live in the upper townships of the county, refused to attend the fair on account of the small pox, which loathsome disease they firmly believed was epidemic here. Really, there is not a case in town.

Despite the rainy weather of Thursday, we are pleased to know that the Society not only met their expenses, but realized some profit. The receipts foot up $2800.

The up train on the L. & B. R. R. on Friday night, consisted of ten cars and all these were crowded with passengers. There is a steady increase each year in the number of visitors outside of the county, to our fair.

There was a good-humored but noisy crowd in town on Friday night. Far too many intoxicated young men were to be seen on the fair grounds, both Friday and Saturday. An unusual amount of liquor was drank and much of it by mere boys, who very plainly showed the effects of their indulgence.

The police had an easy time on the grounds, as the large crowd was very orderly. Not a fight or disturbance of any kind occurred, so far as we have knowledge.

The hotels did a lively business on Friday. The Exchange was crowded to its utmost capacity, the bed rooms were all taken and numbers of guests had to content themselves with cots and sofas. The dining room was filled with one set of hungry men and women, and two or three more sets, equally hungry, waited outside. Mine host Tubbs proved equal to the demands made upon him and accommodated all who applied for meals. The Central was also thronged, and Mr. George H. Brown was kept busy supplying the wants of his guests. He has made many improvements in the hotel and was able to satisfy all who called upon him. Bloomsburg is fortunate in possessing two such excellent hotels and in this respect is far ahead of many larger towns.

W. H. Giger, a barber of Catawissa, while crossing the track during the colt race on Friday, was struck by the wheel of a sulky and knocked down. He was not much hurt, but is somewhat sore from his tumble. The little daughter of I. S. Kuhn was run over, near the entrance gate, and it was at first thought by those who witnessed the occurrence that she was seriously injured. The horse's knee struck her and she fell between the wheels, turning a complete somersault. Fortunately, she was not struck by the hoofs, and was only stunned and bruised. She was able to walk home, and bears no marks of her adventure except a bruise on her forehead. Considerable indignation was expressed at the carelessness of the young man who drove the horse. He should have been more watchful in passing an entrance gate, through which crowds were entering and departing.

In the intervals between the heats of the race on Friday, a merry crowd of young fellows afforded much amusement to the crowd around the stand. They were equipped with penny trumpets from which proceeded doleful sounds, and were led by a drum major who carried a cane and with it executed the various manoeuvres peculiar to those gorgeous and imposing adjuncts to brass bands. This impromptu organization likewise sang with great vigor and energy, the dignified leader marking time with his cane.

The hardest-worked officer of an Agricultural Society is the Secretary and on him depends, to a greater or less extent, the success of a fair. Mr. Fred. B. Hartman is entitled to praise for the energetic and intelligent labor he gave to the affair, and may well feel satisfied with the result. He was always polite and obliging and ready to furnish any information desired, no matter how many demands were made upon him. It is unavoidable that there should be some failures of plans in such exhibitions, but there were very few last week, and none that materially affected the public enjoyment. We, in common with many others, are indebted to Mr. Hartman and to the other officers of the Society for many courtesies and for facts that could hardly have been attained without their aid. That there was money enough to pay all expenses and leave a balance on hand, although one day was practically of no account financially, proves good management, and the officers are to be congratulated upon the very satisfactory condition of affairs.

There was a commendable absence of squabbling and quarreling at the races this year, and there were neither harsh words nor angry feelings on the part of the judges or horsemen.

Mr. Caspar Rhawn was the orator of the board of judges, and it was agreed by an unanimous vote, that as an extempore speaker he possesses merits far above the average. It requires eloquence of a most persuasive kind to soothe the ruffled feelings of a driver and check the disappointment of a crowd.

W. M. Hughes, of Hazleton, brought a trotter to the fair, but contrary to the expectations of his friends, did not enter the horse in the free-for-all race.

Among the visitors on the grounds, Friday, were Hon. Robert Klotz and Gen. William Lilley, of Mauch Chunk; James E. Gay, of Laflin; Capt. Tom C. Parker, of Wilkes-Barre; W. M. Gearhart, prothonotary of Montour county.

Very many persons seem to be unaware of the danger they incur by standing on the edge of the track during a race. Especially is this true as regards the turn just below the judges' stand. If a rein should break when the horse is rounding this sharp corner at full speed, or if the animal should take fright and bolt the track, serious injuries if not death would ensue. Either of these events is liable to occur at any time and yet there is always a crowd of men and boys to be found taking the risk of mutilation or death, either from ignorance or thoughtlessness. It would be well if the officers of the Society would insist that all spectators must remain inside the railing, where they are protected. A fatal accident would render this action imperative.

BARBED WIRE

are undoubtedly the cheapest and most durable fence made, is not affected by fire, wind or flood, does not cause snow drifts, takes fewer posts and stock cannot push it down. Our wire is four pointed, is made of two strands of number 12 best galvanized steel wire twisted together just enough to allow for contraction and expansion in Summer and Winter, barbs are fastened every seven inches. The use of barbed wire is no longer an experiment, as last year over one hundred thousand miles were put up. We believe our wire to be the best and cheapest now manufactured because it is made of the best steel wire and runs 15 feet to the pound having the greatest strength and visibility with the least weight of any made. Put up on spools of about 100 rods weighing about 100 pounds. Price per pound 11 cents by the spool, less quantities 11½ cents per pound.

HEALTH AND HAPPINESS

It seems strange that any one will suffer from the many derangements brought on by an impure condition of the blood, when SCOVILL'S BLOOD and LIVER SYRUP will restore perfect health to the physical organization. It is indeed a strengthening syrup, pleasant to take, and has proven itself to be the best blood purifier ever discovered, effectually curing Scrofula, Syphilitic diseases, Weakness of the Kidneys, all Nervous disorders and Debility. It corrects Indigestion. It makes the old feel young, and the young feel gay; and will invariably drive out of the system the many ills that human flesh is heir to. A single bottle will prove to you its merits as a health renewer, for it acts like a charm, especially when the complaint is of an exhaustive nature, having a tendency to lessen the natural vigor of the brain and nervous system.

A DANGEROUS COUNTERFEIT.

There is a dangerous counterfeit in circulation, purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of the great value of "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer" is the fact that parties knowing its efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a "fac simile" of the signature of "D. E. Becker"—the manufacturer—blown in the glass; and the "Restorer" is as clear and harmless as water, while it possesses all the component properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth, and color to the hair. Purchase only from responsible parties. Each bottle warranted. C. N. Crittenton, New York City, Wholesale Agent. oct. 22, '80-1f

Strange Tests.

In early times, especially among the German tribes, in case of doubt it was the custom to appeal to the gods to decide in favor of innocence or guilt. Out of this arose the ordeals which lasted long after the introduction of Christianity, and which were modified, restricted, and at last suppressed.

One of the last of these strange relics of the past, was the wager of battle, in which the accused and the accuser fought in the presence of the judge, and God was supposed to favor the right, and give victory to the just cause. It will scarcely be credited, and yet it is a solemn fact, that it was not until the year 1819, within the memory of many still alive, that wager by battle was abolished in England.

The Germans carried it with them to England, but Germany was the country where wager of battle was most common. When a man was accused of a crime, he could deny his guilt and declare himself ready to prove his innocence by a personal combat. The challenge had to be accepted unless the accuser could show that the accused was not entitled to the privilege of battle. A day was appointed by the judge for the combat, the defendant was taken into custody, and the accuser gave security to appear at the time and place fixed. On day of the battle, the parties met in the presence of the judge, armed with the appointed weapons.

Even where a woman was the accuser, the woman she impeached might thus challenge. As however, a man would be almost certain to overcome his frail antagonist, regulations were adopted which put them more on an equality. The man was to stand in a pit nearly up to his waist, to be armed with a club hardened in the fire; the dress to consist of tunic and trowsers, that of the woman being all united. Her arm was either a club, or a cloth in which a stone, weighing from one to five pounds was tied. According to the regulations in some parts of Germany, the man's club was twelve inches long, and twice the thickness of the thumb at the end. The woman's was heavier.

Six weeks' preparation was always allowed, and on the day of the combat the weapons and attire of the antagonists were carefully examined.

It was no trifling matter. The party who failed did so at the forfeit of life, and, in the case of a woman, she was burned alive in the pit where the accused had stood.

When the combatants, each with four seconds, an advocate, a marshal of arms, a trainer and a monitor, entered the arena, marked by a circle of stones, the strictest silence was enjoined. Only the seconds were allowed to speak, and they interfered in case of any trouble arising.

When the signal was given the combat began. A blow struck before this forfeited the battle. As the fight went on, each was allowed to call for time twice. If either called a third time the opposite side was declared victorious.

The victory consisted in exhausting the opponent, or striking him down; and if even one of the antagonists dropped his weapon three times the decision was recorded against the unfortunate person, and death was the penalty.

After Many Days.

AN AESTHETIC ROMANCE OF REVENGE.

A young girl leaned idly against the richly carved staircase of a mansion on Warburton avenue, Yonkers, and gazed languidly into the brilliantly lighted parlor in which groups of those on whose cheeks the brilliant flush of health was glowing, glided gracefully through figures of a waltz.

Trisstissma Vere was an only child. As her name indicated, a great sorrow was connected with the entrance into a cold, cruel world of this red-lipped beauty, whose nineteenth birthday was being celebrated by the merry throngs to whom allusion has been made. On the night of her birth the young father, who had looked forward with such tender joy to this crowning point in his life had started out hurriedly for the doctor and had fallen into a coal hole. The nurse said it was a bad omen. When Mr Vere sued the city for $25,000 damages and got a verdict for six cents, he remembered this. Turning sadly away from the court house, an old gray gipsy woman stopped him.

"Do you know me, W. H. Vere?" she hissed in a low voice, her face lighting up with a malignant look.

"No, woman; what would'st thou with me?"

"Forty-seven years ago," muttered the old crone hoarsely, "your dead and gone father put ipecac in some melons that were growing in the back yard of the Vere mansion. The next day our entire family threw up everything they possessed. I was only a little girl then, but I remember the cold, pitiless smile on the face of your father as he rode by our humble cot, and saw my youngest brother going to the drug store for something to settle his stomach, and swore to be revenged. I have kept my oath. My son was in the jury that tried your case, and his vote defeated you. But do not think my anger is sated. The O'Rourkes never forgive. Ere another sun shall have risen a deep sorrow will fall on your house. Remember the gipsy's warning and tremble."

And with these words the toothless virago stepped silently around the corner and was lost to sight.

The night the celebration of Trisstissima's nineteenth birthday took place, and in the excitement of the event W. H. Vere thought of nothing but how to make his guests happy. About 11 o'clock the butler approached his mistress and whispered a few words in her ear. A frightened look passed over her face, and hastily seating herself on a fauteuil she sent a servant to summon her husband. He came.

"Bill," she said hoarsely, "some one has stolen the ice cream."

"God help us!" ejaculated the grief-stricken man. "Why did I not heed the gipsy's warning?"

The party was a failure, and the haughty pride of the Vere family was humbled.

The next morning a little boy brought home seven empty ice cream freezers, saying that a dark visaged man had hauled them to him for delivery.

The old gipsy woman disappeared mysteriously and at the end of that time she—got out of jail.

A farmer who is noted for the excellence of his corn crop says that his plan for years has been to sow clover on a third part of his plow land, and let it grow and remain uncut through the entire season, plowing it under late the next season and planting corn upon it. His experiment, he says, teaches him that the clover, with its vast amount of roots, is fully equal to twenty-five loads of manure per acre. Then he takes another third part and proceeds in the same way. Few farmers appreciate the value of clover.

"Did you hurt yourself?" inquired a sympathetic passer-by of a man who had slipped and fallen. "No, confound it," was the reply, "but the pavement did."

A Good Chicken Story.

We heard a good chicken story yesterday, whether old or new we don't know, but it is good anyhow.

An irascible sea captain settled down to Portland life by the side of a well-tempered man, and the two got along very well until the hen question came up. Said the captain: "I like you as a neighbor, but I don't like your hens, and if they trouble me any more I'll shoot them."

The mild mannered neighbor studied over the matter some, but knowing the captain's reputation well by report, he replied:

"Well, if we can't get along any other way, shoot the hens, but I would take it as a favor if you would throw them when dead over into my yard and yell to my wife."

"All right," said the captain.

The next day the captain's gun was heard, and a dead hen fell in the quiet man's yard. The next day another hen was thrown over, the next two, and the day after three.

"Say," said the quiet man, "couldn't you scatter them along? We really cannot dispose of the number you are killing."

"Give them to your poor relations," gruffly replied the captain.

And the quiet man did. He kept his neighbors well supplied in chickens for some weeks.

A few months after the captain said to the quiet man:

"I have half a dozen nice hens I am going to give you if you will keep quiet about that affair."

"How is that?" said the quiet man. "Are you sorry because you killed my hens?"

"Your hens?" said the captain. "Those hens belonged to my wife. I did not know she had any until I had fed you and your neighbors all summer out of her flock."

A LEADING PROFESSOR SPEAKING TO SENSIBLE PEOPLE.

Dr. S——, the prominent Eastern medical lecturer, says: "Every day sensible people come to me compaining of their health being broken down. The answers to my inquiries always are—what I surmise—nature's laws have been totally disregarded; consequently the blood, the stream of life, becomes contaminated—and as a result of this blood poisoning, I find dyspepsia and disordered functions of the heart, lungs, liver and kidneys, accompanied by head ache, nervous debility and other impaired organic functions, often verging on paralysis. In order to keep the digestive organs in proper health and strength, I and my friends in the profession have recommended Brown's Iron Bitters—they act so mildly and soothingly, never leaving any unpleasant after effects, strengthening the organs of digestion, and permanently removing every symptom of ill health, languor and debility. No remedy in the East gives such good satisfaction as Brown's Iron Bitters, and all druggists can procure it for you. Don't be persuaded to use a substitute. This remedy contains no alcohol and it is the only preparation of iron that does not blacken the teeth.—Sun.

If you want to get the reputation of knowing a heap, do as Professor Proctor does. He guesses what happened three or four million years ago and predicts what is to happen 15,000,000 years hence. It is only a few years since he commenced, and now he can get credit at any grocery.

SIMMONS LIVER REGULATOR

The Great Unfailing SPECIFIC FOR Liver Complaint.

THE SYMPTOMS OF LIVER COMPLAINT

are uneasiness and pain in the side, sometimes pain in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism; the Stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; bowels, in general, costive, sometimes alternating with lax; the head is troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation; considerable loss of memory, with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done; often complaining of weakness, debility and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the Liver is generally the organ most involved.

REGULATE THE LIVER, AND PREVENT

Dyspepsia, Constipation, Jaundice, Billous Attacks, Chills and Fever, Headache, Colic, Depression of Spirits, Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Piles, etc.

Tonic, Alterative and Cathartic!

Simmons Liver Regulator, purely vegetable, is the medicine generally used in the South to arouse the torpid Liver to healthy action.

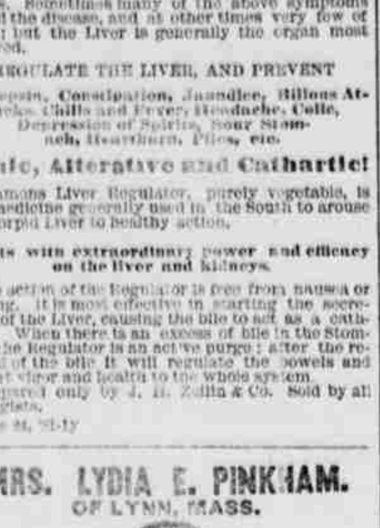

It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy on the liver and kidneys.

The action of the Regulator is free from nausea or griping. It is most effective in starting the secretions of the Liver, causing the bile to act as a cathartic. When there is an excess of bile in the Stomach, the Regulator is an active purge; after the removal of the bile it will regulate the bowels and impart vigor and health to the whole system.

MRS. LYDIA E. PINKHAM. OF LYNN, MASS.

DISCOVERER OF

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

The Positive Cure

For all Female Complaints.

This preparation, as its name signifies, consists of Vegetable Properties that are harmless to the most delicate invalid. Upon one trial the merits of this Compound will be recognized, as relief is immediate; and when its use is continued, in ninety-nine cases in a hundred, a permanent cure is effected, as thousands will testify. On account of its proven merits, it is to-day recommended and prescribed by the best physicians in the country.

It will cure entirely the worst form of falling of the uterus, Leucorrhœa, irregular and painful Menstruation, all Ovarian Troubles, Inflammation and Ulceration, Floodings, all Displacements and the consequent spinal weakness, and is especially adapted to the Change of Life. It will dissolve and expel tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development. The tendency to cancerous humors there is checked very speedily by its use.

In fact it has proved to be the greatest and best remedy that has ever been discovered. It permeates every portion of the system, and gives new life and vigor. It removes faintness, flatulency, destroys all craving for stimulants, and relieves weakness of the stomach.

It cures Bloating, Headaches, Nervous Prostration, General Debility, Sleeplessness, Depression and Indigestion. That feeling of bearing down, causing pain, weight and backache, is always permanently cured by its use. It will at all times, and under all circumstances, act in harmony with the law that governs the female system.

For Kidney Complaints of either sex this compound is unsurpassed.

BLOOMSBURG STATE NORMAL SCHOOL

SIXTH NORMAL SCHOOL DISTRICT.

Bloomsburg, Columbia County, Pennsylvania.

Rev. D. J. WALLER, Jr., Ph. D., Principal.

THIS SCHOOL, as at present constituted, offers the very best facilities for Professional and Classical learning.

Buildings spacious, inviting and commodious; completely heated by steam, well ventilated, lighted by gas, and furnished with a bountiful supply of pure, soft spring water.

Location healthful, and easy of access. Teachers experienced, efficient, and alive to their work. Discipline, firm but kind, uniform and thorough. Expenses moderate. Fifty cents a week deduction to all expecting to teach. Students admitted at any time. Rooms reserved when desired.

Courses of study prescribed by the State:

I. Model School. II. Preparatory. III. Elementary. IV. Classical.

Adjunct Courses: I. Academic. II. Commercial. III. Course in Music. IV. Course in Art. V. Course in Physical Culture.

The Elementary, Scientific and Classical Courses are PROFESSIONAL, and Students graduating therein, receive State Diplomas, conferring the following corresponding Degrees: Master of the Elements; Master of the Sciences; Master of the Classics. Graduates in the other Courses receive Normal Certificates of their attainments, signed by the Officers of the Board of Trustees.

The course of study prescribed by the State is liberal, and the Scientific and Classical courses are not inferior to those of our best Colleges.

The State requires a higher order of citizenship. The times demand it. It is one of the prime objects of this School to help to secure it, by furnishing intelligent and efficient Teachers for her Schools. To this end it solicits young persons of good abilities and good purposes,—those who desire to improve their time and their talents, as students. To all such it promises aid in developing their powers, and abundant opportunities for well paid labor after leaving School. For Catalogue, address the Principal.

HON. WILLIAM ELWELL, President Board of Trustees. F. P. BILLMYER, Secretary.

EXCELLENT FOR LADIES AND WEAKLY PERSONS AND THE AGED.

Excellent for Females.

Speer's Port Grape Wine

FOUR YEARS OLD.

This Celebrated Native Wine is made from the juice of the Oporto Grape raised in this Country

Its Invaluable

Tonic and Strengthening Properties are unsurpassed by any other Native Wine. Being the pure juice of the Grape, produced under Mr. Speer's own personal supervision, its purity and genuineness are guaranteed. The youngest child may partake of its generous qualities and the weakest invalid use it to advantage. It is particularly beneficial to the aged and debilitated, and suited to the various ailments that affect the weaker sex. It is in every respect a WINE TO BE RELIED ON.

SPEER'S

P. J. Sherry,

The P. J. SHERRY is a Wine of Superior character and partakes of the golden qualities of the grape, from which it is made. For Purity, Richness, Flavor and Medical Properties, it will be found unexcelled.

SPEER'S

P. J. Brandy.

This BRANDY stands unrivaled in this Country, being far superior for medical purposes.

IT IS A PURE distillation from the grape and contains valuable medical properties.

It has a delicate flavor, similar to that of the grapes from which it is distilled, and is in great favor among first class families.

See that the signature of ALFRED SPEER, Passaic N. J., is over the cork of each bottle.

HALL'S VEGETABLE SICILIAN HAIR RENEWER

Has been in constant use by the public for over twenty years, and is the best preparation ever invented for RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS YOUTHFUL COLOR AND LIFE.

It supplies the natural food and color to the hair glands without staining the skin. It will increase and thicken the growth of the hair, prevent its blanching and falling off, and thus AVERT BALDNESS.

It cures Itching, Eruptions and Dandruff. As a HAIR DRESSING it is very desirable, giving the hair a silken softness which all admire. It keeps the head clean, sweet and healthy.

The State Assayer and Chemist of Mass. and leading Physicians endorse and recommend it as a great triumph in medicine.

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE FOR THE WHISKERS

will change the beard to a BROWN or BLACK at discretion. Being in one preparation it is easily applied, and produces a permanent color that will not wash off.
